The green is starting to fade, and I don't really want to throw it away since I really like it. I'm not quite sure what to do. I had a dress in the closet that was in a similar color, but this jacket isn't exactly the same. I have a hard drive that used to contain Ubuntu 12.04. This hard drive recently died, so I bought a new one, installed it and it was working fine. Now, the old one is back, but it's not connected to the system. What is the best way to add the hard drive so that Ubuntu can detect it, and use it? A: Most new Ubuntu 12.04 installs allow you to safely remove and replace the hard drive without having to modify GRUB or anything. Open up a Terminal and type: sudo fdisk -l This will list all your hard drives, and the one you need is probably the one with the "Linux" partition. I suggest you copy the contents of the old drive onto the new drive. While doing this you can use Windows to recover any missing files. Make a full backup with Clonezilla. Once you have copied the contents of the old drive, boot from a live CD and run this command: sudo grub-install --root-directory=/media/linux /dev/sda Where /media/linux is the location where your /boot directory lives, and /dev/sda is your new drive's device name. It may be that your boot partition was erased from the hard drive so the first command won't work. You can try the following:
